Skyline Engineering Announces Move to Support Rapid Growth

Skyline Design Makes the Move to Large Office Space

New York, NY (November 6, 2018)-Leading, full-service engineering firm, Skyline Engineering announced plans to relocate their New York City design office to a newer, larger space to support their continued growth and expansion.

With the help of Adams & Company Real Estate firm, Skyline will take residence in the Art Deco style building at 42 West 39th Street on November 23rd, alongside other notable tenants such as Perry Ellis International and Bluefly.com.

Conveniently located between Penn Station and Grand Central Station, and just steps away from Bryant Park in Midtown Manhattan, the newly remodeled 8,500 square foot space will feature open floor plan design and multiple collaborative spaces, better suited to supporting Skyline's dynamic 30-person design team and many clients.

"Our move couldn't come at a more perfect time. The new space will allow us to accommodate not only our growing staff but our current and future clients as well" CEO, Matt Wavro explained.

Skyline plans to unveil the new workspace at their annual holiday party December 2018.
